Marques Hagans

WR, Virginia

War Room analysis

Strengths: Is versatile; was Virginia's starting QB for two seasons after playing at receiver and running back and on special teams for two years. Has above-average hands and plays aggressively on special teams.

Weaknesses: Is undersized for wide receiver and lacks speed. Struggles to win jump balls.

Bottom line: Hagans does not excel at any one particular position but has skills in each of the major offensive positions. Versatility is his greatest asset. He projects as a free agent who should make it to training camp in the summer.

Dan Pompei analysis

Is athletic. Probably will be a return specialist. Has played receiver and running back. Doesn't have special speed, but makes plays. Is a football player and a winner. Has limited value because he's too short for quarterback, and probably is too short for receiver.

No. 32 on Pompei's WR rankings

Correspondent Analysis

The Rams will be him every opportunity to make the team as a punt returner. He could grow into an Antwaan Randle El role. --Jim Thomas
